After the Giants get through with Brooklyn and the Braves with Philadelphia, the two great contenders for the pennant will meet at Boston in a series of three games.

Naturally the Giants are desirous to gain all advantages that will widen the distance between them and the Braves. Therefore the game this afternoon is of so much importance that an attendance above the ordinary may be looked for. The Giants have always been a great drawing card in Pittsburgh where they have always been popular in spite of the face.

Now that a chance has come to rest up his dependable trio of pitch-ers, it is likely that McGraw will use Demarce against the Pirates to-day. This will enable him to have a fresh squad for the heavy work at Brook-lyn. There will be two double-head-

Real Troubles of the Giant Begins When They Meet Dodgers This Week

Even If They Do Lose to Pirates To-Day They Can't Be Knocked Out of First Place.

While Boston was knocking the pennant aspirations out of the Cardinals the Giants easily defeated the Cubs, maintaining for themselves a haif game lead. They play Pittsburgh to-day and, as it is the only game scheduled in the National League, the worst that can happen is a return to the East in a tie with the Braves. If the Giants should beat the Pirates they will be a full game in front.

Manager of the Tigers.

I pick the Giants to win their fourth consecutive pennant this year, but those who think the Braves will split wide open are greatly mistaken. This is why I nigure New York has a better chance than Boston. McGraw's team until a few days ago was playing anywhere from twenty-five to forty points below its normal form. Boston for six weeks has been driving at one of the most sensational paces ever attained by a big league club. A great many of its victories have been shutouts, established by three wonderful pitchers. It is not to be presumed that this tric will be able to go on indefinitely holding all opposition to handfuls of hits daily. I do not believe Boston is going to break badly, but all that is necessary for it to do is to falter. The Braves cannot hope to better their speed. New York cannot very well fail to show improvement. With New York it has been largely a case of poor pitching. The return to form of Mathewson and Marquard seems to have given renewed hope to the flagging spirits of the champions.

I think the fight will be between New York and Boston to the end of the race. Both St. Louis and Chicago will have to play the majority of their remaining games away from home, while their Eastern rivals are at home. The big fight will come ne doubt next week with the Giants in Boston. Then a serious setback for either is likely to prove fatal.

the Reds. But with either of those clubs there is always the danger of a flareback as the Giants well remember. Against the Champs the Reds made a clean sweep.

The intensity of the sadness felt in St. Louis cannot be appreciated very well this far East, but travellers who have returned from there declare it.

Braves Have No Game Scheduled and If Champions Lose They'll Tie Them for Lead.

"Well," he answered, "there couldn't anything make much difference with Matty's batting average. His living doesn't depend on it."

The asking of waivers on George Wiltse of the Giants probably means that McGraw has found a nice berth for him in some minor league. But for his friendship for "Hooks" McGraw would have asked waivers last fall. He asked Wiltse to take the trip around the world last fall to help the Giants out of a hole, and when Wiltse came to his assistance McGraw gave him another year in which to make good as a regular. Wiltse is one of the most popular ball players that ever appeared on the Polo Grounds, but he is no more popular with the fans than he to with McGraw personally.

As the season wanes with no hope of the Yanks doing anything particularly noteworthy in the way of pennants, it becomes more and more apparent that Roger Peckingpaugh is a shortstop of the first water. In addition to his wonderful fielding Peckingpaugh has been a leading factor in the heavy hitting that has landed the last few games.
